Colon Leads Way in Postseason Awards

July 6, 2010 Deptford Twp., NJ

The Roadrunners captured their sixth NJCAA Baseball National Championship on May 26 and the awards have not stopped coming in since. Three members of the Roadrunners championship team have been named All-Americans, one was named the player of the year, one player has been drafted and another named to the Gold Glove team. We will try to keep all the awards coverage and media coverage here. Check back for any updates...

All-Americans: The Roadrunners put the most members of one team on the All-American list for the 2010 season. OF Alexi Colon led the way as a 1st Team All-American and also reeled in the the Division III ABCA Player of the Year Award. Colon's statistics speak for themselves: 15 homeruns, .404 batting average, 54 RBI's and a .567 OBP.

Joining Colon on the All-American list are teammates Matt Smith and Nick Alloway. Both were named 2nd Team All-Americans. Smith finished the season with a perfect 8-0 record and also two saves. He had an outstanding 0.68 ERA for the season, giving up only 3 earned runs in 40 innings pitched. Smith struck out 37 batters on the season while walking only 12. Alloway finished the season with a 9-1 record and set the tone for the Roadrunners in the NJCAA World Series pitching 7 1/3 innings with 8 K's against Tyler JC. Alloway's 2.79 ERA coupled with 47 strikeouts and only 13 walks earned him his way onto the list.
